northwesterly.

A black and white photograph of a dirt road lined with bare trees. The road is unpaved and appears to be made of dirt or gravel, with visible tire tracks. It curves slightly to the right in the distance. On both sides of the road, there are many trees without leaves, their bare branches reaching upwards. The ground is covered with fallen leaves and some low-lying vegetation. The overall scene is quiet and somewhat somber due to the lack of foliage.

Known as "Number 4," because of its ascent up a hill to a dairy farm called, the Number 4," this old dirt road is the southwestern border of the District. Note the regularly harvested sugar
bush on either side.

1930, contributing. The photographer was looking northeasterly.

A harvested corn field. It is farmed by the current owners of the Benjamin Mason Homestead. The corn goes to feed a dairy farm in neighboring Marlborough.

house was built by Lawrence Rathbun, a pioneer in the development of small lots of forests
as independent tree farms.
